Argentina is elected 266th pope

■ Jorge Bergoglio takes name Francis after five-ballot conclave

By Nicole Winfield
Associated Press

VATICAN CITY — Jorge Bergoglio of Argentina was elected pope Wednesday, becoming the first pontiff from the Americas and the first from outside Europe in more than a millennium. He chose the name Francis, associating himself with the humble 13th-century Italian preacher who lived a life of poverty. Looking stunned, Francis shyly waved to the crowd of more than 100,000 people who packed a rain-soaked St.

As white smoke billowed out from Vatican City, people worldwide watched with eager anticipation Wednesday to find out who would be the new head of the Catholic Church.

The selection of Cardinal Jorge Mario Bergoglio of Argentina was met with great happiness by local clergy.

"I was overjoyed just to know we have a new leader in our church," said Father Terry Devine with St. Agnes Parish in Uniontown.

The priest said he had sort of felt like an orphan since Pope Benedict XVI stepped down last month, but now feels like there's a new leader with a new perspective.

The theme of Easter is new life and resurrection, and Devine said the selection of Pope Francis I will bring in a kind of new clergy.

In a move that could foreshadow a merger of the two organizations, the board of the Northwest Kentucky Forward regional economic development group voted unanimously late Wednesday afternoon to hire Henderson Chamber of Commerce President Brad Schneider as its interim CEO.

Schneider will lead the day-to-day operations of both organizations starting next Tuesday under a memorandum of understanding between the two. He will serve as interim president and CEO of NWKF under a 120-day contract.

County continues slow, growth; 22nd in state

By Chuck Stinnett

In the second decade of the 21st century, Henderson County is continuing its years-long trend of slow but steady population growth, while Union and Webster counties continue shrinking slightly, according to U.S. Census Bureau estimates released today.

As of mid-2012, Henderson County remains Kentucky's 22nd-largest county with an estimated 46,513 residents. However, faster-growing Nelson and Shelby counties in Central Kentucky could overtake Henderson County within a few years.

Henderson County gained an estimated 263 residents since the 2010 Census. That increase ranked 28th among Kentucky 120 counties.

The population gain represented a growth rate of 0.6 percent, which is two-thirds the statewide average of 0.9 percent and tied for the 44th-fastest growth rate in Kentucky.

Half of the counties in Kentucky lost population from 2010 to 2012, primarily in Western, Eastern and Southern Kentucky.

Comedian to students: Love not a three-letter word

By Erin Schmitt

Contrary to popular belief, sex and love aren't interchangeable.

This was the message behind the "Laugh Out Loud" program held Wednesday night at South Middle School. The youth rally was a warm-up act for Christian comedian Mike G. Williams, who will be speaking tonight at the annual spring fund-raising banquet for Marsha's Place.

"He does not only banquets like we are having tomorrow night, but he also does a lot of abstinence presentations around the country, and so we thought it would be so awesome to bring him in here to do a rally for the youth," said Jeanmarie Parrott, the director of Marsha's Place.

After starting out with some quips about breakfast foods, the comedian switched to more somber topics, peppered with jokes to keep things a bit light.

Prosecutor: School rape victim didn’t consent

The Associated Press

STEUBENVILLE, Ohio – A 16-year-old girl was “substantially impaired” after an alcohol-fueled party, was unable to consent to sex and suffered humiliation and degradation when she was raped by two high school football players, a prosecutor said Wednesday in her opening statement at the boys’ trial.

But a lawyer for defendant Trent Mays said his 17-year-old client “did not rape the young lady in question.”

Special Prosecutor Marianne Hemmeter and Mays’ attorney, Brian Duncan, spoke at the opening of the juvenile court trial that has drawn international attention to a small town in a football-loving region of eastern Ohio.

Hemmeter told Judge Thomas Lipps, who is hearing the case without a jury, that she would show that the girl was “somebody who was too impaired to say no, somebody who was too impaired to say stop.”

The attorney for Mays’ co-defendant, for Ma’Lik Richmond, 16, gave no opening statement.

The case has divided the community amid allegations that more students should have been charged. It has also led to questions about the influence of the local football team, a source of a pride in a community that suffered massive job losses with the collapse of the steel industry.

Richmond and Mays are charged with digitally penetrating the West Virginia girl, first in the back seat of a moving car after a party Aug. 11 and then in the basement of a house. Mays also is charged with illegal use of a minor in nudity-oriented material.

Witnesses said the girl was so drunk she threw up at least twice and had trouble walking and speaking. She was also photographed being carried by the two young men.

In an excerpt of a videotaped interview with ABC’s “20/20,” Richmond said the photo was a joke. He contends the girl was awake and was a willing participant, the show said.

Inmate loses bid for clemency experts

Steve Beshear to spare him from execution for the 1991 slayings of Rodney and Lynn Vaughn after a dispute in Laurel County. Foley, a former FBI informant, is also on death row for four other slayings.

The anticipated clemency bid comes as Kentucky seeks to restart executions for the first time since 2008.

Earlier this year, Kentucky switched from using three drugs to carry out a lethal injection to a method that uses 3 grams of sodium thiopental or 5 grams of pentobarbital — similar to the method used by Ohio.

If those drugs are not available within seven days of an execution date, the state may use a two-drug method involving continued injections of 60 milligrams of a combination of Midazolam and hydromorphone.

Franklin Circuit Judge Phillip Shepherd halted lethal injections in 2010 as the state prepared to execute Gregory L. Wilson, 56, for the 1987 rape, kidnapping and murder of 36-year-old Debbie Pooley in Kenton County.

A hearing on the state’s request to lift an order halting executions is set for Monday in Frankfort.

Beshear has requests to set execution dates for Foley and 57-year-old Ralph S. Baze, convicted of killing a sheriff and deputy in Powell County in 1992.

But he has given no indication if or when he will act on those requests should the injunction be lifted.

Foley sought funds for a neuropsychologist, saying he has an extensive history of head trauma, but he lacks a formal diagnosis of a neuropsychological disorder or condition.

Robbery reporter charged with DUI

Gleaner staff

A Henderson County man claiming to be a robbery victim was himself arrested early Tuesday morning.

City police said Robert Swearingen, 21, Reed, reported that he had been beaten up by two men who then stole his cellular phone and wallet. Swearingen told authorities the crimes occurred at Atkinson Park just after midnight Monday. No injuries were reported.

According to a news release, Swearingen drove to McDonald’s on U.S. 41-North around 12:30 a.m. Tuesday to report the robbery, which is under investigation.

After speaking with police, Swearingen was arrested for DUI. He was lodged at the Henderson County Detention Center.

Husband uses cart to move dead wife

■ Hotel staff calls police to the scene

By Richard Gootee
gooteer@courierpress.com
812-464-7431

A Newburgh man was detained for questioning by Evansville police Wednesday after he attempted to remove his wife's body on a luggage cart from an East Side hotel.

Evansville Police Sgt. Jason Cullum, said an employee of the Hampton Inn at 8000 Eagle Crest Blvd. observed the unresponsive woman on a luggage cart and was concerned enough to call 911. The incident occurred about 12:30 p.m.

Cullum said responding officers located the man in the parking lot.

The woman, Robin Frank, 47, of Newburgh, was pronounced dead at the scene.

Her husband, Kenneth Frank, was detained as officers began an investigation. Additional information concerning it was not available Wednesday evening.

Steve Lockyear, chief deputy of the Vanderburgh County Coroner's Office, said there were no visible signs of foul play on the woman's body. However, he labeled the death as suspicious "at the least" and said the investigation into the woman's death is ongoing.

"The circumstances are so unusual that we're treating as suspicious until proved otherwise," Lockyear said.

An autopsy is scheduled for today to determine the cause of death.

Vanderburgh County Coroner Annie Groves said the couple were staying at the hotel because they recently had a fire at their house, but she wasn't sure when that fire happened.

"The activity was suspicious," Cullum said about the man taking the luggage cart outside.

"That's not something you're going to see very often ... to see an adult on there. Obviously the clerk was right, and there was concern that was something was wrong. Fortunately, they called, and we got out there before they got out of the hotel parking lot because that would have made it much more

CodeRed: Countywide alert test set Friday

Gleaner staff

CodeRed, a countywide alert system, will conduct a test call Friday afternoon.

Larry Koerber, director of the Henderson County Emergency Management Agency, said those residents and businesses who want to receive emergency notifications through CodeRed should register at www.hendersonky.us or at www.hendersonema.org. The CodeRed logos are located on the left side of the page and also are highlighted in red.

Koerber said people should double click on the CodeRed link at either of the websites mentioned above and follow the instructions.

Those who have already registered to receive countywide alerts are encouraged to register again to ensure that all information is current.

Koerber asked that those who don't have access to a computer call a relative, friend or neighbor and ask them to register for you.

The alert system, for example, is used in hazardous material incidents to let people know when to stay in their house or evacuate.

The alerts can come via telephone, cellular phone or email. People can also receive text messages.

For more information contact the EMA office at 831-1235.

Some plants fall short on mercury standards

Associated Press

LOUISVILLE — A regional commission that sets water quality standards for the Ohio River says dozens of industrial plants may not be able to meet new standards on mercury limits that are supposed to go into effect later this year.

The Courier-Journal reports that the Ohio River Valley Water Sanitation Commission has sent a list of about 60 such facilities to regulators Kentucky, Indiana, Illinois, Ohio and West Virginia. The panel says current monitoring shows they may not be able to meet the tougher standards set to begin in October.

Commission Director Peter Tennant says the list was drafted as a screening tool for state agencies and to estimate the number of requests the commission may receive for variances.

The newspaper reports the regulatory crunch could lead the commission to put off or change enforcement. There are already health warnings issued on eating fish from the Ohio River due to high levels of mercury. The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency says elevated levels of the substance are of special concern in unborn babies and young children because it can harm developing nervous systems.

In Kentucky, regulators could fine industrial plants that don't meet the new standard up to $25,000 per violations per day, but cases are usually settled for much less.

Officials said facilities such as power plants and factories may need to change how they do business, and sewage treatment plants will need to work with customers on decreasing the amount of mercury dumped into systems.

Tennant noted the difficulty of the task and said the commission is trying to work through possible problems.

"Do we grant a blanket continuance to allow us to sort our way through this? Or do we defer some and concentrate on the big ones? Anything we do is going to be less than ideal," he said.

"This is a big concern," said Judy Petersen, executive director of the Kentucky Waterways Alliance. "We are recognizing more and more the dangers of mercury in the environment and mercury in our bodies."

Annual Runway Red event March 23

■ Community Baptist Church hosting Matthew 25 fundraiser

Special to The Gleaner

Matthew 25 AIDS Services, Inc. plans to pack the Community Baptist Church auditorium on Saturday, March 23, when the nonprofit organization stages its sixth annual charity fashion show and lunch, Runway Red.

Runway Red attendees will enjoy a catered lunch, door prizes, a silent auction and the opportunity to view current fashions from Tri-State boutiques and shops, such as Victoria's, Wildflower, Third Street House, Klassy Kids and Flutter. Vendor tables featuring a variety of products from independent sales representatives will be set up to allow attendees to view and purchase items.

All proceeds from the event will go to Matthew 25 AIDS Services, a local specialty medical clinic that supports, educates and treats those infected with and affected by HIV/AIDS.

"Runway Red is a great opportunity to spend the afternoon having lunch with friends while viewing the latest spring fashions," said the clinic's Director of Community Services, Sally Welch. Each year, this event has an educational component aimed at the community's female population. "We plan this event around National Women & Girls HIV/AIDS Awareness Day, to ensure this segment of our community receives valuable HIV education and testing information," Welch continues. "Our focus at this event is prevention through education."

Doors open at 10:30 a.m., with event beginning at 11 a.m. Admission is $25 per person and tables of six may be reserved for $150. Tickets can be purchased by contacting Matthew 25's Director of Community Services, Sally Welch, or Administrative Support Specialist Dina Winstead, at 270-826-0200, swelch@matthew25clinic.org or dwinstead@matthew25clinic.org.

AIDS Memorial Quilt to be displayed at church

Special to The Gleaner

Sections of the internationally celebrated AIDS Memorial Quilt — the 54-ton, handmade tapestry that stands as a memorial to more than 94,000 individuals lost to AIDS — will be on view from March 20 to March 22 at Community Baptist Church and the Henderson County Public Library.

This free display of The AIDS Memorial Quilt is being hosted by Matthew 25 AIDS Services in conjunction with The Annual Runway Red Fashion Show and Luncheon on March 23.

Visitors may attend Wednesday and Thursday from 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. and Friday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the library.

You may view the sections at Community Baptist Church Wednesday through Friday from 8 a.m. to noon and 1:30 p.m. to 4:30 p.m. Please call the church at 270-830-9057 to verify that someone will be available before you come. One section will be on display at the Henderson County Public Library and six additional sections will be on display at Community Baptist Church. All seven panels will be on display during Runway Red on Saturday, March 23, from 10:30 to 1:30. Call Matthew 25 at 270-826-0200 for tickets.

Established in 1987, The NAMES Project Foundation is the international organization that is the custodian of The AIDS Memorial Quilt. The AIDS Memorial Quilt began with a single 3 x 6 foot panel created in San Francisco in 1987. Today, the quilt is composed of more than 48,000 individual 3 x 6 foot panels, each one commemorating the life of someone who has died of AIDS.

For more information on the upcoming display in Henderson, please call 270-826-0200. For more information on The NAMES Project and The AIDS Memorial Quilt, please visit aidsquilt.org or call the national headquarters at (404) 688-5500.

Drop in deficit won't last long without action

There is nothing better for a bad federal budget than a good economy, and the recovering U.S. economy is beginning to work its magic on the federal deficit, which has been in the $1 trillion-plus range the last four years.

“For once, the government’s financial shape is actually improving and will get better still over the next few years as the U.S. economy continues to pull itself slowly out of the worst recession since the 1930s,” reports the Associated Press.

That “for once” is a little unfair because from 1993 to 1997 the federal deficit, the excess of spending over revenues, fell by more than $230 billion to around $21 billion — itself the lowest in over 20 years — before going into the black for the first time in nearly 30 years.

That happy state of affairs lasted four years, until 2002, and the first round of the George W. Bush tax cuts. The federal budget numbers look so impressive, so orderly, so definitive in the annual White House budget office, but it’s an open secret in Washington that these numbers are just informed guesses often based on improbable assumptions.

For example, the number crunchers are required to assume that Congress will actually do what it says it will.

The Bush White House mistakenly believed it was dealing with a 10-year surplus of more than $5 trillion. Then came a second round of tax cuts. The Bush mantra was “we’re going to put some extra money in your pocket,” neglecting to mention that the money would have to be borrowed.

Then we fought a costly and, as it turned out, unnecessary war in Iraq and are still fighting a second one in Afghanistan, neither of them paid for. One wonders what the response would have been if the government had asked the voters: “We feel for the good of the country we have to invade Iraq. How much more in taxes are you willing to pay to have us do that?”

And finally there was the prescription drug benefit, whose numbers were greatly fudged to get it through Congress. That wasn’t paid for either.

We might have survived that fiscal recklessness if the economy hadn’t tanked in the worst recession since the Great Depression.

The loss of tax revenue and the huge amounts of federal money spend to stop the bleeding drove us deep into the hole and now we’re slowly starting to climb out as the economy picks up.

The nonpartisan Congressional Budget Office predicts the deficit will drop to $845 billion this year, and, the CBO says, even if Congress does nothing the deficit will drop to $430 billion by 2015, about what it was in 2008 as the economy began to crater.

But then the fiscal good news runs out and absent higher taxes, cuts in the rate of increase in Social Security, Medicare and Medicaid or a wholly improbably growth spurt in the economy, we will be back where we started. Not a good place to be.

Those who served deserve better

“Poor Ike,” Harry Truman is said to have famously mused as he sat at his Oval Office desk and thought about Dwight Eisenhower, the legendary five-star general who was about to succeed him as president. “It won’t be a bit like the army. He’ll sit here and he’ll say, ‘Do this!’ ‘Do that!’ And nothing will happen.”

A half-century later, Truman’s words no doubt offer more insight than comfort to yet another commander-in-chief and the four-star army general he picked to be his Secretary of Veterans Affairs. In announcing his selection of Gen. Eric Shinseki on Pearl Harbor Day, 2008, President-elect Barack Obama basically gave the general just one overriding order — to fix what he had repeatedly called the “broken VA bureaucracy.”

To which the general replied with a commitment to “my fellow veterans: I will work each and every day to ensure we are serving you as well as you served us.”

Surely neither envisioned that some four years later their efforts would be heralded by an independent investigative article that was published online Monday beneath this headline: “VA’s ability to quickly provide benefits plummets under Obama.”

Aaron Glantz, a reporter with the independent Center for Investigative Reporting, obtained a number of internal VA documents that show that not only has the backlog of veterans’ unprocessed benefits claims soared — but that many veterans are waiting longer than the department has publicly acknowledged. While the VA reports its average wait time is 273 days, internal department numbers show that veterans filing their first claim wait two months longer than that. And veterans filing for the first time in big cities wait up to twice as long before their benefits claims are processed — New York City veterans experience delays of 642 days; Los Angeles veterans run 619 days.

Sometime this month, the VA documents show, its backlogs will exceed 1 million veterans’ claims. And 97 percent of all veterans’ records are still on paper although the VA has spent $537 million in a four-year effort to convert all records to digital.

The VA confirms the accuracy of the documents Glantz obtained. But VA spokesman Josh Taylor notes that much of the increased backlog problem is the result of a large increase in the number of claims now being filed and the increased range of benefits the Obama administration has opened up for veterans.

But what Obama and Shinseki’s VA have failed to act on is the reality of that enormous backlog that simply will not go away unless they change their bureaucracy’s approach and order it done.

The best — and probably only — solution at this point must be some variation of a plan devised in 2007 by Harvard professor Linda Bilmes. It calls for the VA to process benefits claims the same way the Internal Revenue Service processes taxpayers’ returns — closely examine just a random sample, but generally process them all. At least all of those that are relatively straightforward. Bilmes estimated that 88 percent of the claims could be processed and paid within 90 days, at a cost of just $500 million.

Obama and Shinseki can reverse the backlog tide that has all but swamped the VA — but only by taking bold action. The Harvard professor’s unorthodox, unconventional-but-common-sense plan may now be the VA’s only way to achieve the goal Obama laid out for Shinseki in 2008: “Veterans who have served in Iraq and Afghanistan ... deserve a smooth, error-free, no-fail, benefits-assured transition into our ranks as veterans.”

They clearly aren’t getting that now. Yet, after fighting our battles half a world away, that is precisely what they deserve from us.

Selective reading being used to justify drones

All of us tend to be selective in sorting out what we want to believe — consider the selective reading of the Bible and the Constitution.

For example, those who condemn homosexuality and gay marriage on the basis of Scripture are shockingly silent on the sin of usury, which is much condemned in the sacred texts.

As for the Constitution, those who treat it as if it were the Bible also pick and choose the parts they believe in most with a religiously narrow focus.

Working in journalism, I naturally venerate the First Amendment. Yes, it will always be No. 1 for me. But for others, the Second Amendment is No. 1 because any limitations on free speech are nothing compared with limitations on assault rifles. The NRA gives the impression that if people would only shut up about guns, liberty would be guaranteed.

Now consider the Tea Partiers, who sincerely care about the Constitution. You will observe that they do not flock to join the American Civil Liberties Union, which also is in the business of passionately protecting the Constitution. As always, Americans read the same text and find different meanings.

REG HENRY

To the Tea Party, the Constitution is not in the least remote from the 18th century, when it was written. It is a document of enumerated and thus limited powers and so, modern Americans, do not even think about doing anything that was not thought of back then. Like drones, although it was probably good that they did not exist in those days, otherwise we might have a right to keep and bear armed heavier-than-air machines.

Here’s the point, better late than never: Drones are currently the greatest example of Americans believing selectively what they want to believe.

President Barack Obama is fast becoming the drone president and perhaps the Constitution-shredder-in-chief. It’s a dubious distinction some of us (i.e., me) thought belonged to his predecessor, the man history and his supporters forgot because it’s too embarrassing to remember.

Those of us who had a problem with what’s-his-name asserting that the Constitution did not protect Americans because he said they were enemy combatants must also observe that Mr. Obama with his killing lists ordering death from on high is in the same league. And so are his legal experts with their semantic gymnastics trying to justify treating American citizens as if they weren’t citizens. They drone on.

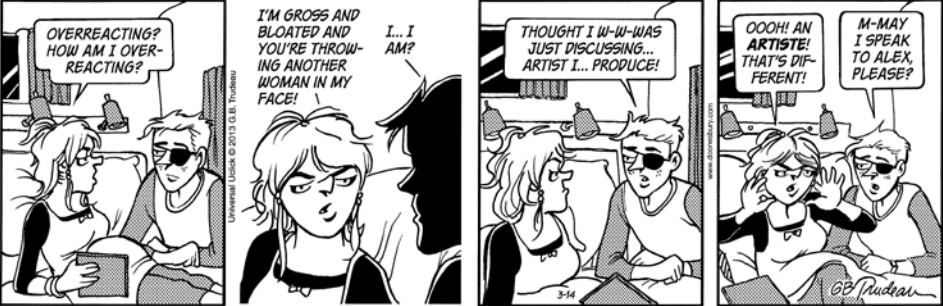

It’s difficult, though. In my selective way, I concede that blasting some American al-Qaida member deep in Yemen seems reasonable. You can’t have the drone read him his constitutional rights through a loudspeaker. My attitude is: Occupy any area that is clearly a battlefield in a war against America. But too often there is collateral damage, the modern term for innocent people dead. We are on a slippery slope in a toboggan of our own manufacture.

Worse yet, the administration won’t quite rule out the use of drones in America in the future, now mostly only a threat to nudist colonies when the weather warms up.

Is America’s use of drones honorable — or just a practical response to a difficult war? Whether you look to the Bible or the Constitution, no selective reading quite answers the question, nor whether the interest on the nation’s moral account is worth the cost. Up there in the clouds, we need clarity.

THE CONCLAVE ELECTION

What's Next

VATICAN CITY — The pomp surrounding his selection was just the beginning of an exceptionally busy few days for Pope Francis. A look at the first night — and what comes after.

THE SELECTION

From the moment of uttering “I accept” in Latin, in front of his fellow cardinals in the Sistine Chapel, the job is his, and it starts instantly.

According to tradition, his first act is declaring his choice of name as the Roman Catholic church's 266th pontiff. That done, he's whisked off to the Room of Tears, just beyond the chapel to be dressed in papal white.

Since Monday, the day before the conclave began, three white robes — in small, medium and large to cover all the bases — had been hanging on a clothes rack in the room. Seven pairs of red shoes waited in white boxes to be tried on for size by the new pontiff.

Per tradition, outfitted in papal garb, the new pontiff heads back to the Sistine Chapel, where the other cardinals pledge obedience to the man they chose to lead the church.

NEXT STEP

Just before Benedict XVI left the papacy last month, to begin the first papal retirement in 600 years, he added another step in the ritual before a cardinal steps out onto the central loggia, or balcony, of St. Peter's Basilica to announce the name of the new pope. The newly elected pontiff was to pause to pray in solitude in the Pauline Chapel, another magnificent chapel decorated by Michelangelo and smaller than the nearby Sistine Chapel.

GREET THE MASSES

Next up is greeting crowds in St. Peter's Square.

“Brothers and sisters, good evening,” Francis said to wild cheers in his first public remarks as pontiff. “You know that the work of the conclave is to give a bishop to Rome. It seems as if my brother cardinals went to find him from the end of the earth. Thank you for the welcome.”

FIRST FULL DAY?

As the Vatican spokesman, the Rev. Federico Lombardi, told reporters a few hours before the election, it's up to the new boss to set the agenda. Holding to tradition, he will celebrate a Mass on Thursday at the altar in front of Michelangelo's “Last Judgment” in the Sistine Chapel with the cardinals. On his first full day he also plans to pray at St. Mary Major basilica in Rome.

His words

Brothers and sisters, good evening!

You know that it was the duty of the Conclave to give Rome a Bishop. It seems that my brother Cardinals have gone to the ends of the earth to get one... but here we are... I thank you for your welcome. The diocesan community of Rome now has its Bishop. Thank you! And first of all, I would like to offer a prayer for our Bishop Emeritus, Benedict XVI. Let us pray together for him, that the Lord may bless him and that Our Lady may keep him.

And now, we take up this journey: Bishop and People. This journey of the Church of Rome which presides in charity over all the Churches. A journey of fraternity, of love, of trust among us. Let us always pray for one another. Let us pray for the whole world, that there may be a great spirit of fraternity. It is my hope for you that this journey of the Church, which we start today, and in which my Cardinal Vicar, here present, will assist me, will be fruitful for the evangelization of this most beautiful city.

And now I would like to give the blessing, but first — first I ask a favor of you: before the Bishop blesses his people, I ask you to pray to the Lord that he will bless me: the prayer of the people asking the blessing for their Bishop. Let us make, in silence, this prayer: your prayer over me.

Now I will give the Blessing to you and to the whole world, to all men and women of good will. (Blessing)

Brothers and sisters, I leave you now. Thank you for your welcome. Pray for me and until we meet again. We will see each other soon. Tomorrow I wish to go and pray to Our Lady, that she may watch over all of Rome. Good night and sleep well!

Argentina's Cardinal Jorge Bergoglio gives a mass outside the San Cayetano church in Buenos Aires in 2009.

Simplicity&Humility

■ Bergoglio's choice signals new direction

By Brian Murphy and Michael Warren

Associated Press

VATICAN CITY — In unadorned white robes, the first pope from the Americas sets a tone of simplicity and pastoral humility in a church desperate to move past the tarnished era of abuse scandals and internal Vatican upheavals.

The choice of Argentine Cardinal Jorge Bergoglio — who took the name Francis — reflected a series of history-making decisions by fellow cardinals who seemed determined to offer a message of renewal to a church under pressures on many fronts.

The 76-year-old archbishop of Buenos Aires — the first from Latin America and the first from the Jesuit order — bowed to the crowds in St. Peter's Square and asked for their blessing in a hint of the austere style he cultivated while modernizing the Argentina's conservative Catholic church.

In taking the name Francis, he drew connections to the 13th century St. Francis of Assisi, who saw his calling as trying to rebuild the church in a time of turmoil. It also evokes images of Francis Xavier, one of the 16th century founders of the Jesuit order that is known for its scholarship and outreach.

Francis, the son of middle-class Italian immigrants, is known as a humble man who denied himself the luxuries that previous Buenos Aires cardinals enjoyed. He came close to becoming pope last time, reportedly gaining the second-highest vote total in several rounds of voting before he bowed out of the running in the conclave that elected Pope Benedict XVI.

Groups of supporters waved Argentine flags in St. Peter's Square as Francis, wearing simple white robes, made his first public appearance as pope.

“Ladies and Gentlemen, good evening,” he said before making a reference to his roots in Latin America, which accounts for about 40 percent of the world's Roman Catholics.

LIFE OF BERGOGLIO

Bergoglio often rode the bus to work, cooked his own meals and regularly visited the slums that ring Argentina's capital. He considers social outreach, rather than doctrinal battles, to be the essential business of the church.

He accused fellow church leaders of hypocrisy and forgetting that Jesus Christ bathed lepers and ate with prostitutes.

“Jesus teaches us another way: Go out. Go out and share your testimony. Go out and interact with your brothers. Go out and share. Go out and ask. Become the Word in body as well as spirit,” Bergoglio told Argentina's priests last year.

Bergoglio's legacy as cardinal includes his efforts to repair the reputation of a church that lost many followers by failing to openly challenge Argentina's murderous 1976-83 dictatorship. He also worked to recover the church's traditional political influence in society, but his outspoken criticism of President Cristina Kirchner couldn't stop her from imposing socially liberal measures that are anathema to the church, from gay marriage and adoption to free contraceptives for all.

“In our ecclesiastical region there are priests who don't baptize the children of single mothers because they weren't conceived in the sanctity of marriage,” Bergoglio told his priests. “These are today's hypocrites. Those who clericalize the Church. Those who separate the people of God from salvation. And this poor girl who, rather than returning the child to sender, had the courage to carry it into the world, must wander from parish to parish so that it's baptized!”

New pope is 1st Francis, saint of peace, poverty

By Frances D'emilio

Associated Press

VATICAN CITY—In choosing a name no pope had ever taken, Pope Francis could be signaling that he sees the need for change in the Roman Catholic church.

The name recalls two of the church's most famous saints.

One is Francis of Assisi, the man from the Umbrian hill town who renounced a wealthy, dissolute lifestyle

“It was precisely Francis the Lord asked to repair his church in ruins.”

Umbrian bishops, in a congratulatory message to found the Franciscan order of friars in 1209, embracing a life of poverty and simplicity and going out in the countryside to preach of joy and peace.

The other is Francis Xavier, a globe-trotting

Spaniard who became one of Christianity's greatest missionaries, and was a founding figure of the Jesuit order.

Pope Francis didn't cite either of those famous men when he made his first public speech as pontiff, but within an hour of his presentation, his choice of name was being hailed as heralding what could be his priorities at the helm of a troubled church.

Umbria's bishops sent congratulations in a message noting that the new pope had taken up name of the saint of Assisi, one of Italy's patron saints who in his time sought to “renew the church.”

“It was precisely Francis

Pope thrills crowd

■ Words, dress make impact in introduction

VATICAN CITY — Before they even saw his face, Pope Francis had already won over the Roman masses.

The announcement that he would be known by the same name as St. Francis of Assisi, patron saint of Italy, sent the crowd into ecstasy.

He did even better with his first words, when the 76-year-old Argentine said the cardinals had reached to the “end of the earth” to find the bishop of Rome — recalling the beloved Pope John Paul II, a Polish cardinal who told his first crowd in 1978 that cardinals had called him “from a far country.”

The former Cardinal Jorge Bergoglio is the son of an Italian immigrant and his Italian is only lightly accented.

“Let us pray for the whole world, that there may be a great spirit of fraternity,” he said.

The Romans weren't the only ones who were won over.

Kim Daniels, director of Catholic Voices USA, was struck by the humility the pope exhibited when he emerged on the balcony.

“He kneeled down. He asked for the crowd's blessing. We saw him pray along with the crowd the Our Father, the Hail Mary, joining us all in those prayers that are so familiar to Catholics,” she said.

“It was a sign of humility. It was a sign that holiness is the most important thing here. It is so, so wonderful to see someone really focus on prayer like that.”

And he sounded almost grandfatherly as he wished the crowd, “Good night and sleep well.”

His choice of dress also sent a message. Francis steered clear of the fur-trimmed red cape known as a mozzetta that popes often wear for ceremonial occasions, and put on a stole only for his blessing. That is in keeping with a personal style that has been considered the antithesis of Vatican splendor.

At home in Buenos Aires, he sold the expensive archbishop's residence and lived in a modest apartment, did his own cooking and rode the bus to work.

That is in marked contrast with the way a number of Vatican cardinals live, starting with splendid homes and chauffeured cars.

Francis' predecessor, Benedict XVI, lived modestly. But his values clashed with Vatican officials linked to corruption and careerism and he was undermined by a scandal of leaked confidential documents that was blamed on his personal butler.

Now those issues fall on Francis to solve.

the Lord asked to repair his church in ruins,” the bishops said.

Pope Francis' predecessor, Benedict XVI, had explained his resignation last month by saying he didn't have the mental or physical stamina to shepherd the church, rocked by scandals and confidential leaks in the Vatican's bureaucracy and losing many faithful to secularism or more dynamic forms of worship.

Pentagon is forming cyber teams to guard against attacks on U.S.

By Richard Lardner
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Defense Department is establishing a series of cyber teams charged with carrying out offensive operations to combat the threat of an electronic assault on the United States that could cause major damage and disruption to the country's vital infrastructure, a senior military official said this week.

Gen. Keith Alexander, the top officer at U.S. Cyber Command, warned during testimony that the potential for an attack against the nation's electric grid and other essential systems is real and more aggressive steps need to be taken by the federal government and the private sector in order to improve digital defenses.

Alexander told the Senate Armed Services Committee on Tuesday that foreign leaders are deterred from launching cyberattacks on the United States because they know such a strike could be traced to its source and would generate a robust response.

But the country is not preventing what Alexander called "low-level harassment of private and public websites, property and information by other states." He did not mention any specific countries, even though the Obama administration is escalating its criticism of cyber thefts by China that have become intolerable to the international community.

Offensive cyber weapons are growing and evolving, Alexander said, and it is only a matter of time before tools developed by other nations wind up in the hands of extremist groups or even individuals who could do significant harm.

Alexander said 13 cyber teams are being formed for the mission of guarding the nation in cyberspace. He described them as "defend-the-nation" teams but stressed their role would be offensive. In comments to reporters after the hearing, Alexander likened the teams' duties to knocking an incoming missile out of the sky before it hits a target. He also said the teams would work outside the United States, but he did not say where.

He also said another 27 cyber teams are being established to support the military's warfighting commands while others will protect Defense Department's computer systems and data.

But even as Alexander detailed these moves, he pushed lawmakers to pass cybersecurity legislation that would make it easier for the government and the private sector — which controls critical infrastructure such as the electric grid, banking systems, chemical facilities and water treatment systems — to share detailed information about who is getting hacked and what to do about it.

President Barack Obama signed an executive order last month that relies heavily on participation from U.S. industry in creating new voluntary standards for protecting information and expands the government's effort to provide companies with threat data. But the order doesn't do enough to address the threat, administration officials said. Unresolved issues include the legal liability facing companies if they divulge information, and whether companies should be compelled to meet certain security standards.

The general also told the committee that there needs to be a clear consensus on how the nation is organized to protect critical infrastructure from cyberattacks. "It takes a team to operate in cyberspace," Alexander said. "But at times I think in talking about the team approach, we're not clear on who's in charge when."

Another issue that still needs to be settled is what constitutes an act of war in cyberspace, Alexander said. He does not consider cyberespionage and the theft of a corporation's intellectual property to be acts of war. But Alexander said, "I think you've crossed the line" if the intent is to disrupt or destroy U.S. infrastructure.

Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich., the committee's chairman, noted that Obama recently issued a classified policy directive to govern cyber operations. The Pentagon also has developed a list of procedures on how to respond in "cyber crisis" situations, he added, and the Pentagon is expected to issue cyber rules of engagement for military commanders.

"The fact that these foundational policy frameworks and planning actions are just now taking shape serves as a stark illustration of how immature and complex this warfare domain remains," Levin said.

Alexander said the private sector maintains varying degrees of security over its computer systems. The financial industry typically is more secure than companies that operate the electric grid. Still, he said, banks are vulnerable to being disrupted by what are called denial of service attacks, a technique that works by overloading a website with traffic.

Combat stress can take toll on troops far from front lines

Lolita C. Baldor

LANGLEY AIR FORCE BASE, Va. — They may never come face to face with a Taliban insurgent, never dodge a roadside bomb or take fire, but they still may be responsible for taking lives or putting their own colleagues in mortal danger. And now the military has begun to grapple with the mental and emotional strains endured by these Air Force personnel.

While they are thousands of miles from the gritty combat in Afghanistan, the analysts in the cavernous room at Langley Air Force Base in Virginia relive the explosions, the carnage and the vivid after-battle assessments of the bombings over and over again. The repeated exposure to death and destruction rolling across their computer screens is taking its own special toll on their lives.

Now, for the first time, an Air Force chaplain and a psychologist are walking the floor of the operations center at Langley, offering counseling and stress relief to the airmen who scrutinize the war from afar.

Sitting at computer banks lining the expansive room, the Air Force analysts watch the video feeds streaming from surveillance drones and other military assets monitoring U.S. forces around the globe. Photos, radar data, full-motion video and electronically gathered intelligence flows across multiple screens. In 15- to 20-minute shifts, the airmen watch and interpret the information.

Through chat windows, they exchange data, update intelligence reports and talk in real time with commanders on the ground, including troops whose lives may depend on the constant and rapid flow of information they get from Langley.

For example, they may provide information that allows a commander to order an airstrike, but after the weapon is launched, the analysts might suddenly see that the insurgents are fleeing or that civilians or children are moving into the strike zone, and by then they are helpless to do anything about it.

"If you have a 21-year-old playing a video game, when the game is over they start again. Here, if they miss a bad guy, that's what they carry with them," said Air Force Maj. Shauna Sperry, a psychologist who has just begun working with the air wing.

They also often have to go over video of an incident repeatedly to assess the battle damage.

"It's not a video game, it's real," said Capt. Robert Duplease, the chaplain assigned to the 497th Intelligence, Surveillance and Reconnaissance Group. "It's repeated exposure to destruction and warfare. They see it, rewind it, see it, rewind it."

Cluster of fatal teen crashes belies declining trend in U.S.

By Betsy Blaney
Associated Press

LUBBOCK, Texas — Derrek Lee Hager had just dropped off his girlfriend in the Texas Panhandle and was headed with four other friends to a nearby town to continue enjoying their spring break. But the teens never made it, perishing in a fiery wreck near Dumas after the driver ran a stop sign and collided with a tanker loaded with fuel.

The deaths of the five Texas teens came the same day as an accident in Ohio that killed six and a day before a crash in Illinois killed four. Three teenagers died Friday in southeastern Indiana when police said the drivers of two pickups ran a four-way stop and collided.

The deadly accidents serve as horrific reminders of the perils of teen driving but contrast statistics indicating that fatal crashes among teen drivers have declined during the past decade, according to a report released last month by the Governors Highway Safety Association, which represents state highway safety offices. The report also indicates that deaths of younger teen drivers sharply increased during the first six months of last year, reversing a 10-year trend.

There were 435 16-year-old drivers killed in 2000, according to the report, but by 2011 that had dropped to 173. During the same time period, deaths among 17-year-old drivers dropped from 564 to 250.

But deaths of 16- and 17-year-old drivers in traffic accidents during the first six months of 2012 rose a combined 19 percent during the same period of the previous year, from 202 to 240 deaths. The report, which does not include passenger deaths, is based on preliminary state data that sometime changes.

Despite the recent increase, overall teen driving deaths are significantly lower than they were a decade ago, when teen drivers traveled with fewer state-imposed restrictions, including limits on driving with teen passengers and driving at night.

Deaths of young passengers when the driver was between the ages of 15 and 20 have dropped significantly since 1982, when 1,898 riders within the same age range died, according to the report. In 2011, the year for which most recent data are available, the number of deaths of passengers between 15 and 20 years old dropped to 777, the report showed.

Meanwhile, fewer American teens are getting driver's licenses, part of a demographic segment that also includes those in their 20s and 30s, transportation researchers have found. Among those groups, the number of people with driver's licenses has dropped significantly during the past three decades in the United States and in some other wealthy nations with a high proportion of Internet users.

Researchers surmise that virtual contact through Internet and other electronic means is reducing the need for face-to-face visits among young people, researchers say.

Early Tuesday, the bodies of four high school students from Wilmington, Ill., aged 15 to 17, were recovered from a nearby creek.

The Indiana wreck happened after six students off from school to attend a Future Farmers of America event at a rural church in Versailles, Ind., left the event. Three died at the scene and three others were injured. Police believe both drivers ran a four-way stop, with a Dodge truck hitting a smaller Ford F-250 broadside.

USE WHAT PRO AND OLYMPIC ATHLETES WISH THEY COULD USE!

BANNED BY MLB, NFL AND THE PGA!

BUT NOW FINALLY AUTHORIZED FOR RELEASE TO THE PUBLIC!

DEER ANTLER SPRAY

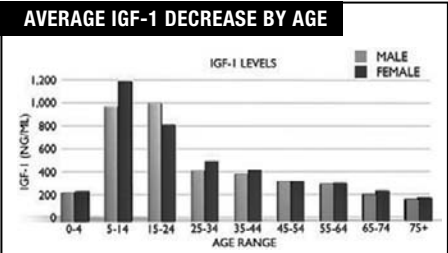

● PERFORMANCE ● ENDURANCE ● RESULTS

“In all my 50 years of being a pharmacist I have never seen a product deliver such incredible results... Substantial increases in muscle mass... with a decrease in overall body fat starting in just seven days! Pro athletes have seen incredible results boosting performance and endurance...

helping them to reach their full athletic potential!” Says Dr. Earl Mindell

New fast acting strength and endurance formula!

Imagine increasing the size of your biceps in just 7 to 10 days... or increasing muscle mass and decreasing body fat almost effortlessly... Now imagine being able to play sports at peak mental and physical performance without ever getting tired!

Boost Your IGF-1 levels with Andecyn

These are the kind of wonder results reported by athletes all over the world when asked about Velvet Deer Antler Spray.

- Increase energy and endurance. (Regain the “get up and go” of your youth)...
- Improve joint health and eliminate pain...
- Reduce inflammation (the hidden cause of most modern diseases)...
- Improve mood. (No more mood swings and feeling “blue”)...
- “Bullet-Proof” you against illness and disease...
- Give you back your “teenager horny” sex drive...
- Restore normal blood pressure... And much more!

Originally developed in New Zealand from the antlers of deer.

Each Spring the antler cycle begins anew and the skin around the pedicle expands and grows, initiating new antler growth. The hard antler from the previous season is cast off and the growth of the new season's velvet crop begins. The antlers are humanely taken from the deer and then go through the process of extraction and bottled into a potent energizing spray and used for its medicinal and performance qualities.

YES! Did you ever wonder why Russia dominated the Olympics for so many years? Well...now you know! Plus it was even given to astronauts to increase the levels of strength, energy and endurance... and now recently used by many professional athletes and banned as a performance-enhancing substance by the MLB, NFL and PGA. But don't despair... Deer Antler Spray is finally authorized for release to the public under the name Andecyn for immediate delivery to all US citizens!

Miracle deer antler reported in leading scientific journals... Super charges your strength muscle size and athletic endurance!

Andecyn works in at least 4 ways to help bolster physical strength insurance and performance:

1. Growth Factor IGF-1 which naturally occurs in deer antler acts like HGH by helping to build and strengthen tissue increase lean muscle tissue and decrease body fat.

2. Research indicates that the growth factors encourage the absorption of chondroitin and glucosamine sulfate which helps in the promotion of healthy joints.

3. Growth factors TGF – A and TGF – B promote wound healing through a concerted effort with epidermal growth factor and platelet derived growth factor.

4. Vascular Endothelial Growth Factor (VEGF) Promotes venous, venule, artery, arteriole and capillary health by providing the essential co-factors for repairing and restoring damaged blood vessels.

No-Risk 60-Day Trial Supply Will Be Sent To All Who Call Within The Next 15 Days!

The name of this clinically tested wonder spray is ‘Andecyn’ licensed exclusively for distribution in North America to ‘Schweiz Health’. And here is how you can try it and prove its effectiveness to your own satisfaction---without risking a single penny.

Customized Therapy for Neuropathic Pain

By Jed Dunaway, RPh., Mike Farmer, RPh., and Ginny Sue Floyd, RPh.

Neuropathic pain affects 3-8% of the population and can be a personally devastating and costly condition. The burning, aching, or shooting pain is often associated with sensory changes which can be particularly severe and disabling. The pain may also be accompanied by weakness and skin breakdown. Diabetic peripheral neuropathy (DPN) is a common complication of diabetes. Distal symmetric polyneuropathy is estimated to affect 50% of diabetic patients. Because neuropathic pain is typically more difficult to treat than other types of pain, it often results in a poor quality of life for patients. Many commercially available drugs have limited effectiveness and frequently cause side effects. Topical therapies, analgesic combinations and gene-related therapies show promise. Preparations are often prescribed to contain multiple medications such as ketoprofen, gabapentin, lidocaine, clonidine and amitriptyline that work in different ways to relieve pain. Each patient is unique; that is why we compound customized medications!

beginning for the Catholic church.

Devine and other local clergy expressed excitement not only in having a new Holy Father, but also because the papal conclave had never elected anyone born outside of Europe.

“This is the first for the Americas,” said Father Larry McBride of Holy Name of Jesus Catholic Church. “It’s very exciting rather a seasoned, popular and humble pastor who would draw followers to the faith and help rebuild a church stained by scandal.

The cardinal electors overcame deep divisions about the future of the church to select the 266th pontiff in a remarkably fast, five-ballot conclave.

Francis asked for prayers for himself, and for retired Pope Benedict XVI, whose stunning resignation paved the way for the conclave that brought the first Jesuit to the papacy. Francis also spoke by phone with Benedict after his election and plans to see him in the coming days, the Vatican said.

“Brothers and sisters, good evening,” Francis said to wild cheers in his first public remarks as pontiff from the loggia of St. Peter’s Basilica.

“You know that the work of the conclave is to give a bishop to Rome. It seems as if my brother cardinals went to find him from the end of the earth, but here we are. Thank you for the welcome,” he said.

Across the planet, Latin Americans burst into tears and jubilation at news that the region, which counts 40 percent of the world’s Catholics, finally had a pope to call its own.

“It’s a huge gift for all of Latin America. We waited 20 centuries. It was worth the wait,” said Jose Antonio Cruz, a Franciscan friar at the St. Francis of Assisi church in the colonial Old San Juan district in Puerto Rico.

Bergoglio had reportedly finished second in the 2005 conclave that produced Benedict — who last month became the first pope to resign in 600 years. The speed with which he was elected pope this time around to have a pope from a whole different background and with a whole new perspective.”

It appears when history is written that it will show the cardinals had a clear idea of what they wanted for leadership of the Church, said Bishop William Medley with the Roman Catholic Diocese of Owensboro.

The cardinals selecting a South American cardinal as the new Holy Father speaks to the universality of the church, he said.

“It’s the first time the pope is a non-European, so the worldwide character of the church is made manifest now in a way that wasn’t before and that’s exciting,” Medley said.

Historically, most popes have been Italian. The two most recent popes broke that tradition, hailing from Poland and Germany, respectively.

Medley said he understands that most of the Argentine Catholic faithful are of Italian descent. The new pope was born to Italian immigrants in Buenos Aires.

McBride said he knew little about the new pope aside from what he’d found out by researching the former cardinal on the Internet, but learned Bergoglio had shown great concern for the poor. He added that it’s fitting the new pope chose the name Francis, since Saint Francis was a patron to the poor.

“This is the first Pope Francis,” said Devine. “It’s a brand new name for a brand new pope.”

In this photo provided by the Vatican newspaper L'Osservatore Romano, Pope Francis waves the crowd from the central balcony of St. Peter's Basilica at the Vatican, Wednesday. Argentine Cardinal Jorge Mario Bergoglio, who chose the name of Pope Francis, is the 266th pontiff of the Roman Catholic Church.

indicates that — even though he is 76 and has slowed down from the effects of having a lung removed as a teenager — he still had the trust of cardinals to do the job.

After announcing “Habemus Papam” — “We have a pope!” — a cardinal standing on the balcony of St. Peter’s Basilica on Wednesday revealed the identity of the new pontiff, using his Latin name, and announced he would be called Francis.

The longtime archbishop of Buenos Aires is the son of middle-class Italian immigrants and is known as a humble man who denied himself the luxuries that previous Buenos Aires cardinals enjoyed.

He often rode the bus to work, cooked his own meals and regularly visited the slums that ring Argentina’s capital. He considers social outreach, rather than doctrinal battles, to be the essential business of the church.

Catholics are still buzzing over his speech last year accusing fellow church officials of hypocrisy for forgetting that Jesus Christ bathed lepers and ate with prostitutes.

In a lifetime of teaching and leading priests in Latin America, which has the largest share of the world’s Catholics, Bergoglio has also shown a keen political sensibility as well as the kind of self-effacing humility that fellow cardinals value highly, according to his official biographer, Sergio Rubin.

Bergoglio, who as a teen lost a lung to infection, showed that humility on Wednesday, saying that before he blessed the crowd he wanted their prayers for him and then he bowed his head amid the silence from the crowd.

for decades if it is done correctly, and that takes time and due diligence. This arrangement will provide us that time.”

For more than two months, the two organizations have been exploring a possible merger with the hope that combining their resources could do more to boost the Henderson area’s economy.

But Henderson-based NWKF has also been searching for a new president and CEO since last fall, when Kevin Sheilley left to take a new position in Florida.

NWKF board members say Schneider emerged as the top choice from among 80 applicants.

“He was absolutely the right candidate for the job,” Union County Judge-executive Jody Jenkins said. “The passion he showed in the interview process, it kept coming up again and again. It was apparent to all of us that he had what it takes to move us forward.”

Northwest Kentucky Forward, created in late 2006, grew out of the former Henderson Economic Development Council. NWKF was envisioned as a regional organization pursuing economic development for Henderson, Union, Webster and McLean counties.

It succeeded in pulling that region closer together. NWKF helped land new industries for Union and Webster counties as well as Henderson County, and developed a program for meeting face-to-face with every existing industry in the four counties at least once a year, helping several expand.

However, NWKF never hit the home run — a headline-grabbing landing of a big new industry — that its supporters longed for. That shortfall made NWKF’s second five-year fundraising campaign in 2011 a tough sell, board members have said.

In the meantime, the Henderson Chamber under Schneider’s leadership enjoyed a record-breaking membership campaign that same year. The chamber had set a goal of signing up 70 new members to push the total to more than 500 once again. But during a 2 1/2-day blitz, the chamber signed up 171 new members, which pushed membership to more than 600 for the first time ever.

“Brad has a passion for this community and a strong work ethic, and with the growth at the chamber (since Schneider became president in 2009), hopefully he can grow this organization,” Henderson County Judge-executive Hugh McCormick said.

While Northwest Kentucky Forward helped bind ties between the counties of Henderson, Union, Webster and McLean, the existence of both NWKF and the Henderson Chamber proved confusing for many Hendersonians. In many citizens’ minds, the Henderson Chamber is the organization responsible for everything from economic development to welcoming newcomers to the community.

Even with a degree of cooperation between the chamber and NWKF that hadn’t been seen in many years, “We were kind of falling over each other,” Schneider said Wednesday.

Consolidating the two organizations, supporters say, could erase that confusion.

“I think the advantage would be that this works into a situation where in our community and our region, everybody is on the same page and everybody is shooting for the same target,” Austin said. “I think that has not always been the case in the past.”

Schneider could even help cement ties between the counties beyond what NWKF has already done. He has been a leader in C-LINK — the Chamber Leadership Initiatives for Northwestern Kentucky, a coalition of 12 chambers of commerce in this region — that pushes for common goals such as development of Interstate 69 here.

“We have two chambers of commerce in Webster County, in Sturgis and Providence. Actually, some of their people recommended him for the job” at NWKF, Webster County Judge-executive Jim Townsend said.

“It could be, if we handle it properly,” that a merger of NWKF and the Henderson Chamber “could be all OK, even bringing our chambers more into it,” Townsend said. “We’re all working on I-69, and the chambers are already working well together.”

Schneider will come to the interim CEO job at NWKF with no more experience as an economic development professional than he came to the Henderson Chamber job with chamber experience. The son of a Major League Baseball pitcher, Schneider was born in Atlanta and raised in Arizona and California, graduated from the University of Evansville and worked at newspapers in Henderson, Madisonville and Evansville before winning the chamber job in 2009.

Yet Deborah Gray, a professional economic development agent for Kentucky Utilities who chaired the NWKF executive search committee, said that Schneider’s lack of economic development experience wasn’t seen as a detriment.

“Brad has gotten the respect of people from across this region,” Gray said. “... His communication skills. His passion. Brad is a very bright young man. He has so much enthusiasm; he can learn the economic development piece” of his job.

Besides, Schneider has on his staff Donna Crooks, a Certified Economic Developer who joined NWKF last fall as the manager of existing business but who for nearly five months has been juggling two jobs that has her overseeing 29 projects for both new and expanding industries.

“It’s been a huge workload for her to carry,” Jenkins said. “It’s not fair to her.”

But while learning his new job, Gray said, Schneider “has Donna and others he can count on and look to.”

Student who read conclave scripture linked to Henderson

By Erin Schmitt

Jeanette Hollowell got a very early start to her morning Tuesday.

The Henderson resident rose at 4 a.m. so she could watch her grandson, Tony Hollowell, read scripture in front of thousands of people gathered at St. Peter’s Basilica in the Vatican and millions more viewing worldwide via a televised live feed.

“He did a really good job,” Jeanette Hollowell said. “I knew he would because he’s always been cool as a cucumber, not many things phase him.”

Tony Hollowell, 30, is a seminary student in his first year of study at Pontifical North American College. He is the third of 11 children of Joe and Diane Hollowell of Indianapolis.

The whole family was watching as Tony Hollowell performed the first reading of the public mass before the beginning of the cardinal conclave that ended Wednesday with the selection of Cardinal Jorge Mario Bergoglio as the new pope.

Tony Hollowell did not always intend to become a priest, said his grandmother.

Upon graduating from the University of Notre Dame, Tony Hollowell spent five years teaching math and science at Cardinal Ritter High School in Indianapolis. Hollowell’s role model is his dad and initially he wanted to emulate his father by marrying someone like his mother and having children, Jeanette Hollowell said.

Tony Hollowell ultimately decided becoming a man of the cloth was his calling and followed in his older brother John Hollowell’s footsteps into priesthood. John Hollowell is a priest for the Archdiocese of Indianapolis.

He received a doctorate in theology from The Saint Meinrad Seminary and School of Theology. Last fall, Tony Hollowell traveled to Rome to begin studying at the Pontifical North American College.

A student from the seminary is generally asked to read at the mass before the conclave starts and Hollowell was chosen by his rector, Monsignor James Checchio, for the honor.

“We were very proud of him,” said Jeanette Hollowell. “We think it was quite an honor because they usually select someone by lottery, but they were in a hurry to get someone to do this before the conclave started.”

Checchio told the Indianapolis Star that he picked Hollowell for the seminarian’s leadership qualities and how well-liked he is by his classmates. His fellow students chose him to lead freshmen orientation next year and Hollowell is also the captain of the new students’ football team.

Hollowell’s late paternal grandfather, Mojo Hollowell, was Henderson County High School’s longtime head football coach. Aside from Tony Hollowell’s paternal grandmother, his aunt Cindy Huff and her husband, Ed Huff, also reside in Henderson.

CENSUS
from 1A

Union County’s population fell by 157, to 14,850, which was a decline of 1.0 percent.

Webster County’s population dropped by 38, to 13,583, representing a decline of 0.3 percent.

Other area counties losing population included McLean (down 25, to 9,506), Crittenden (down 35, to 9,280) and Hopkins (down 202, to 46,718).

Daviess County remained ranked as the No. 7 largest county, growing by 1,191 to reach 97,847. If it continues that growth, it will top 100,000 residents before the 2020 Census.

The population of McCracken County (where the principal city is Paducah) held nearly steady at 65,549. It remains the 12th-largest county in the state.

The most impressive growth among Western Kentucky counties occurred in Warren County (Bowling Green), the state’s fifth-largest county, which grew 3,318 (or 2.9 percent) to reach 117,110, and No. 11 Christian County (Hopkinsville), which grew 1,472 (or 2.0 percent) to 75,427.

Nine of the 10 counties with the fastest-growing counties are located in the Golden Triangle area formed by Louisville, Lexington and Northern Kentucky, with Warren County being the exception.

Scott County (Georgetown) posted the fastest growth rate at 4.0 percent, followed closely by Boone County (Florence, 3.8 percent) and Shelby County (Shelbyville, 3.7 percent).

The state’s population grew by 41,048, and the two largest counties — Jefferson County (Louisville) and Fayette County (Lexington) accounted for half of that growth.

The population estimates are based on birth and death records as well as migration patterns based on federal income tax returns and other data.

COMEDY
from 1A

“Love is not a three-letter word,” Williams said.

Williams told the audience of about 70-plus teens that his generation had done a great disservice to theirs through music that equated sex with love.

“Love is very different from sex,” he said.

The comedian shared he grew up in a broken home because his parents had sex, but not love. While his two brothers died early and his two sisters turned to drugs, Williams travels around sharing his Christian blend of comedy.

When he’s not touring he splits his time between his family’s Florida home and the Dominican Republic, where provides soup and fresh water daily to Haitian refugees.

Williams handed out $1,000 Dominican Republic currency to a girl in the audience and asked the boy next to her to ask for it. The girl refused.

The comedian then asked the girls in the audience why they would give up their virginity, which he told them was worth much more, if they wouldn’t give the guy they were dating what equaled about $24 U.S. dollars.

He also asked the teens to think of the emotional investment they are giving up by confusing sex with love.

“God designed sex to be a bonding tool between a man and a woman that is a very important tool to keep a relationship alive,” Williams said.

Seating for the Marsha’s Place banquet begins at 6 tonight and the complimentary dinner and the program will follow at 6:30 p.m. Those in attendance can make a financial gift to benefit the pregnancy resource center. The RSVP deadline for the banquet was noon Monday.

■ Lady Cols' comeback falls short as Anderson wins 65-54 in Sweet 16

By Kevin Patton
kpatton@thegleaner.com
270-831-8350

BOWLING GREEN — Henderson County withstood an early long-range shooting clinic from Anderson County and needed three quarters to turn Wednesday's first-round game of the Sweet 16 into a high quality showdown between two of the state's top-ranked teams.

Second-ranked Anderson County (33-1) hit its first five 3-pointers to start the game and quickly opened up a 14-point lead en route to a 65-54 win. The Lady Bearcats, who had shot 72 percent from the field in the first half, led by as many as 17 points in the third quarter before Henderson County (26-3) began a whirlwind comeback to get as close as 50-49 with 4:44 to play.

"It turned out to be the battle we thought it would be. We shot the ball extremely well in the first half, but it was a little bit of fool's gold," Anderson County coach Tony Kays said. "We knew they would make a run. I was proud of our team for withstanding those runs that they made."

The Lady Colonels went without a field goal the final 3:40 of the game and Anderson County ended the game with a 9-0 run.

"Anderson County has got a great team with size, strength and the threes. They're hard to handle," Henderson County coach Jeff Haile said.

Anderson County had four different players hit 3-pointers in the first half and was 7-of-9 from long-range at the break.

"I told them, 'Let's try to shoot it better if we can in the second half. I don't know how we missed those two or three shots,'" Kays said with tongue in cheek.

Early defensive lapses helped the Lady Bearcats get open shots, Haile said.

"We were letting them penetrate and instead of staying strong on the strong side we came off and let them get open looks in the first half," he said.

It wasn't necessarily the inside-out attack that Kays would have preferred.

"We'd like to be a little more inside first than outside, but when we're shooting like that I'm not going to tell them to stop shooting," said Kays, whose teams cooled off to 6-of-20 shooting in the second half.

Henderson County found itself down 24-12 at the end of the first quarter and by as many as 15 before the half.

"You don't want to get down 17, but it could have been 34," Haile said. "I'm proud of the kids. We've done this all year long. We're undersized and undermanned, but we've always played hard. That's all you can ask for as a coach."

Leading 36-24 at the half, the Lady Bearcats were on the verge of a blowout, taking their largest lead at 44-27 with 3:14 to go in the third. A couple of Anderson County turnovers and a Maci Brown 3-pointer quickly had the lead down to 44-34.

"My teammates set me really good screens," said Brown, who made six of her 10 3-point attempts and totaled 18 points.

The Lady Colonels

continued to whittle away at the lead and held Anderson County scoreless from the field for the first 3:36 of the fourth quarter. Ellie Fruit's layup on a runout cut the score to 50-49 with 4:44 remaining. Eriel McKee, who scored a team-high 27 points, answered with a basket in the lane.

An offensive rebound by McKee off a missed free throw pushed the margin back to five. Brown hit her sixth 3-pointer with 3:40 to go to make the score 54-52. Kali Whiteside and Fruit swapped free throws and the score was 56-54 with 3:15 to play.

Henderson County wouldn't score again. Anderson County, which had just two field goals in the fourth quarter, made 9-of-12 free throws in the final 3:00 to pull away.

The Lady Bearcats were 18-of-25 from the stripe for the game, while Henderson County was 3-of-6.

"They got to the free throw line 25 times. We got there six," Haile said. "When the other team shoots that many more free throws than you do, it makes it tough."

Still the Lady Colonels came up empty down the stretch following the comeback. "We had some looks and missed a couple of shots. We turned it over on the wing one time. DeAsia (Outlaw) had a good rebound and definitely got fouled, but there was no call. That's an opportunity to go to the free throw line that we didn't get," Haile said. "Give them credit for the last 3 minutes for holding us down a little bit."

Fruit added 14 points for Henderson County and Outlaw scored 13 with a team-high five rebounds.

Makenzie Cann scored 17 points for Anderson County and Whiteside had 10 of her team's 23 rebounds.

Shelby Valley advanced to meet Anderson County on Friday with a 45-38 win over Corbin in Wednesday's final game.

UK has sense of urgency in SEC tourney

■ Cats hope must-win approach will help them make lengthy run

By Gary Graves
Associated Press

LEXINGTON — Kentucky hopes its must-win approach results in a lengthy run through the Southeastern Conference tournament.

The Wildcats will likely need one to lock up an NCAA tournament berth. Seeing how that “one-and-done” urgency worked their upset of No. 11 Florida last Saturday, the defending national champions (21-10, 12-6) aim to carry it over and win at least twice more this weekend in Nashville, Tenn. Second-seeded Kentucky opens play in Friday’s quarterfinal against Thursday night’s winner between Arkansas and Vanderbilt.

The Wildcats believe that reaching Sunday’s championship will bolster their case for an at-large berth, a shaky scenario before they beat the Gators. Still, with nothing assured, Kentucky players enter the weekend with the mindset of playing each game like it will be their last.

“We’re just going into the tournament with the mindset like we’re not trying to get beat,” Wildcats 7-footer Willie Cauley-Stein said. “We want to win it, obviously, and keep it rolling.”

Kentucky players are confident after finishing second to Florida in the conference. A year after losing in the championship to Vanderbilt as the top seed, the Wildcats return as the No. 2 seed thanks to Saturday’s victory over the Gators that earned a bye and left them possibly playing three straight days instead of four.

That’s no small matter for Wildcats coach John Calipari, who welcomes the shorter path to the final.

“Obviously, any tournament you’re in the higher your seed is, the better your chances are of winning the tournament,” Calipari said this week. “It doesn’t mean we’re going to win it, it doesn’t mean you get to the finals. There are upsets every year in every tournament, but the percentages are in your favor if you’re the higher seed. ... The seed matters.”

At the same time, winning three games in three days is asking a lot from a young Kentucky team that has struggled all season with inconsistency. Such was the case before the Wildcats lost star center Nerlens Noel to a season-ending knee injury on Feb.

Willie Cauley-Stein

12, and their 4-3 record without him symbolizes their difficulty in finding rhythm and cohesion.

The Wildcats rebounded from a 30-point drubbing at Tennessee in their first game without Noel to win three in row before losing consecutive road games at Arkansas and Georgia. That quick slide created a must-win situation against Florida, where Kentucky responded with a gutsy 61-57 victory by outscoring the Gators 11-0 over the final 7:36.

While the victory showed the Wildcats’ resolve under “do or die” circumstances, they must prove they won’t relapse into bad habits. Calipari has been reminding his team through intense practices that they can’t let up now.

“It’s great that he’s not taking back the reins,” forward Kyle Wiltjer said. “We’re just working hard and had a great practice on Monday. ... We’re just bringing it every day in practice, not letting up and holding guys accountable. That’s the main thing, and hopefully translating it to the game.”

The Florida victory brought something out of Kentucky freshmen Archie Goodwin and Alex Poythress, two players Calipari has called out this season for decision-making and enthusiasm respectively. Goodwin’s 16 points led the Wildcats, including five straight to rally them back from a 35-31 halftime deficit and ignite a 19-5 run.

Blaming his own play after the Georgia loss, Poythress was fully engaged against Florida, grabbing a team-high 12 rebounds and scoring nine points. Calipari and teammates praised the intensity they’ve waited for all season and hope he can sustain the effort in the post-season.

“Coach says you mature at different rates and he’s just taking longer to mature,” Cauley-Stein said of Poythress. “With Alex, it’s spurts. He’ll play like a beast in spurts and then I don’t know what happens and he’s not a beast no more. Then there are some games where he’s playing 25 minutes, playing like a beast and those are the games we’re beating people by 20.”

■ Kentucky coach John Calipari says freshman center Nerlens Noel is “doing fine” after surgery on his left knee to repair a torn ACL.

Calipari said in a post on his Facebook account Wednesday that Noel called him after Tuesday’s operation performed by famed orthopedic surgeon James Andrews in Gulf Breeze, Fla. The coach says the surgery “went well” for his 6-foot-10 center, who sustained the season-ending injury in a loss at Florida on Feb. 12.

Noel’s call was placed on speakerphone so he could talk to his teammates.

Kilpatrick powers Bearcats to triumph over Providence

Wire reports

Sean Kilpatrick scored 17 points to lead Cincinnati past Providence 61-44 on Wednesday in a Big East tournament game between teams desperate to improve their postseason credentials.

JaQuon Parker added 15 points and 10 rebounds for the Bearcats (22-10), who might have solidified an NCAA tournament berth with the win. No. 9 seed Cincinnati advanced to a quarterfinal matchup Thursday with No. 5 Georgetown, the top seed, at Madison Square Garden.

Kadeem Batts led the eighth-seeded Friars (17-14) with 14 points and eight rebounds.

■ Syracuse 75, Seton Hall 63: James Southerland hit five 3-pointers in the first half to keep No. 19 Syracuse in the game and Brandon Triche keyed a big second-half run that gave the Orange a 75-63 victory Wednesday in the second round of the Big East tournament.

Fifth-seeded Syracuse (24-8) extended its Big East tenure with the win and the Orange will play fourth-seeded and 17th-ranked Pittsburgh in the quarterfinals on Thursday.

■ Villanova 66, St. John’s 53: Mouphtaou Yarou made his first seven shots and scored 18 points, sending Villanova to a 66-53 victory over St. John’s in the second round of the Big East tournament Wednesday night.

Ryan Arcidiacono added 15 points to help the seventh-seeded Wildcats (20-12) move into the quarterfinals, where they will play Thursday night against fourth-ranked Louisville, the tournament’s No. 2 seed.

■ Mississippi St. 70, South Carolina 59: Fred Thomas scored a career-high 21 points Wednesday night as No. 13 seed Mississippi State defeated No. 12 seed South Carolina 70-59 in the first round of the Southeastern Conference tournament.

Mississippi State (10-21) advanced to a second-round game Thursday against No. 5 seed Tennessee (19-11), which has won eight of its last nine games.

■ Texas Tech 71, West Virginia 69: Dejan Kravic rebounded Texas Tech’s desperation shot and dropped it into the bucket just ahead of the buzzer, lifting Texas Tech over West Virginia 71-69 in the opening round Wednesday night of the Big 12 tournament.

■ Bucknell 64, Lafayette 56: Mike Muscala scored six of his 20 points during a decisive second-half stretch to help Bucknell capture its second NCAA tournament berth in three seasons with a 64-56 win over Lafayette on Wednesday night in the Patriot League title game.

Wire reports

Indiana is standing tall again.

Michigan and Michigan State are right there with the Hoosiers, and Ohio State and Wisconsin aren’t exactly backing down from anyone, either.

The Big Ten tournament starts Thursday, and it’s not hard to see why Spartans coach Tom Izzo declared it one of the best ever. And by best ever, he didn’t just mean best Big Ten tournament.

“We’re looking forward to one of the great conference tournaments of all time, if you ask me,” Izzo said. “When you look at the ranked teams and the teams that aren’t ranked and everyone else, it should be a heck of a Big Ten tournament in Chicago.”

The league is tops in the Sagarin ratings and boasts five teams ranked in the Top 25, including four in the top 10.

One of those top 10 teams — No. 6 Michigan — didn’t even get one of the four first-round byes. Instead, the Wolverines face Penn State on Thursday after falling a point short of sharing the conference championship with a 72-71 loss to Indiana on Sunday.

They need to regroup and figure out a way to get past the Nittany Lions, a team that rallied from 15 down in the second half to beat Michigan a few weeks ago.

Besides Penn State, Michigan might also need to get by Wisconsin and Indiana to reach the Big Ten tournament title game. Those three teams have combined to hand the Wolverines (25-6) four of their six losses, and No. 22 Wisconsin (21-10) is lurking in the second round on Friday after taking the fourth seed.

No. 3 Indiana (26-5), the top seed after winning its first outright conference title conference championship in two decades, will face the Illinois-Minnesota winner. No. 10 Ohio State (23-7), the second seed, gets Purdue or Nebraska, while eighth-ranked and third-seeded Michigan State (24-7) awaits Iowa or Northwestern.

■ Camouflage-patterned shorts. Neon-trimmed tops. Those special uniforms Cincinnati trotted out at the Big East tournament were pretty eye-catching, to say the least.

“The most important thing is the recruits think they look great,” Bearcats coach Mick Cronin said with a smile.

Six college basketball teams are sporting the new Adidas digs during March Madness, and Cincinnati became the first men’s squad to break them out Wednesday in a 61-44 victory over Providence at Madison Square Garden.

“We love them,” said junior guard Sean Kilpatrick, who scored 17 points.

When two of his players were asked by a reporter if the garish uniforms felt better than they looked, Cronin stepped in with a snappy response.

“You notice, if you guys were going to go out tonight, they wouldn’t dress like you, either,” the coach said, drawing laughs. “They think they look good.”

Baylor, Kansas, Louisville, Notre Dame and UCLA also planned to wear the specially designed outfits, which feature bright colors and unusual print.

Baylor, Louisville and UCLA even agreed to have short sleeves on their jerseys.

■ The chairman of the NCAA selection committee says there might be as many as seven teams in contention for No. 1 seeds.

Of course, only four will end up with the coveted spots in the tournament.

Chairman Mike Bobinski said Wednesday the committee will have its work cut out trying to determine who gets the most favorable seeding. The 68-team field will be announced Sunday evening.

The Xavier athletic director says the top seeds were more obvious a year ago. This year, he says, “There will be a number of teams we’ll be considering and discussing for that one line of the bracket.” Among the biggest factors: quality wins on the road.

Bobinski is leaving Xavier after the tournament to take over as Georgia Tech’s athletic director on April 1.

Baseball Cols to start season second in state

Gleaner staff

Henderson County, the state runner-up last season, starts the 2013 season second in the state in the Kentucky High School Baseball Coaches Association's preseason rankings, which were released on Wednesday.

The Colonels, who received one of the 15 first-place votes cast, graduated only two seniors off a team that finished 29-14-1 and lost to Woodford County in the state championship game.

Woodford County, which gathered 12 first-place votes, starts the season atop the coaches poll and returns its top two pitchers from its state title team.

Union County, which was 28-11 last year, is ranked 18th in the preseason rankings and was the only other Second Region team to crack the top 25. The Braves open their season today at 5:30 p.m. at home against Owensboro.

Henderson County opens the season today at 6 p.m. at Caldwell County in a rematch of last year's Second Region championship game.

Spring training crowds are down

■ Pricey tickets, early start, cold weather and WBC are to blame

By Ben Walker

Associated Press

KISSIMMEE, Fla. — Fresh from pitching against solid Atlanta hitters, Jake Westbrook faced a far trickier test: Guess how much fans paid for box seats to watch the exhibition game.

"Hmmm, I have no idea," the St. Louis starter ventured. "Twenty bucks?"

Gotcha! $54 for top tickets sold Tuesday at the Braves' ballpark at Walt Disney World Resort.

"Wow," Westbrook said.

All over Florida and Arizona, teams are paying the price. Spring training attendance is off and several things are to blame, aside from pricey tickets — early start, cold weather and lineups depleted by injured stars and players dispatched to the World Baseball Classic.

The dip is nearly 14 percent lower than it was on this date last year, STATS said.

Games started about a week earlier this season because players wanted to get in shape for the World Baseball Classic.

That meant games were scheduled before many fans arrived for vacation and spring break. By the end of February, several teams had already played for a week.

"I think we started about eight or nine days too early. That means a whole lot," Philadelphia manager Charlie Manuel said.

The weather hasn't been ideal, either — a freak winter storm out West and a cold snap down South.

Normally a big draw wherever they go, the Yankees played to a crowd of 3,213 when they visited the Houston Astros. Then again, the glitziest name in New York's split-squad lineup that day was Matt Diaz.

The Orioles often sold out home games versus the likes of the Yankees, Boston and Philadelphia. Not this year in Sarasota, Fla.

"With the WBC and a whole different start, people plan spring training according to spring break. People have other things going on in their life," Baltimore manager Buck Showalter said.

DAVID GOLDMAN/ASSOCIATED PRESS

In this March 11, 2013 photo, seats sit vacant during a spring training exhibition baseball game between the Minnesota Twins and the Tampa Bay Rays in Port Charlotte, Fla. Spring training attendance is off and several things are to blame.

Big league exhibitions began on Feb. 22 and averaged 5,789 fans through March 12. They started on March 2 last year and averaged 6,703 by that same date, with several teams on their way to setting attendance records.

Major League Baseball drew 30,895 per game during the regular season last year, its best mark since 2008.

Oakland A's manager Bob Melvin noticed the empty seats in Phoenix.

"It seems like it's down some," he said last week-end. "The schedule seems more spread out this year. A lot of people come to games with certain dates in mind."

Better be ready to spend money, too.

It costs more than $25 for a good seat at most spring parks. Several teams vary their prices depending on the opponent or the day — a ticket behind the third base dugout to see the World Series champion Giants host Colorado this Sunday sold for $68.75 on San Francisco's online site.

The Cardinals are among the most popular teams every spring. Like other clubs, they expect bigger crowds throughout March.

U.S. beats Puerto Rico

MIAMI — Gio Gonzalez gave Team USA its best start yet, and David Wright provided a big finish.

Gonzalez pitched five scoreless innings and the Americans beat Puerto Rico 7-1 in the World Baseball Classic on Tuesday night.

Wright drove in five runs, the last three with a bases-loaded double in the eighth. That prompted chants of "U-S-A! U-S-A!" from the crowd of 32,872.

U.S. women win Algarve Cup

The United States has won the prestigious Algarve Cup for the ninth time, beating Germany 2-0 in Wednesday's final at Faro, Portugal.

Reggie Bush to Lions; Wes Welker to Denver

By Barry Wilner

Associated Press

Reggie Bush is heading to Detroit, Wes Welker landed in Denver, and even Ray Lewis got a new deal — with ESPN.

Day 2 of the NFL's free agency frenzy was highlighted by Bush's move to the Lions and Welker switching from one all-time great quarterback, Tom Brady, to another, Peyton Manning.

All-Pro safety Dashon Goldson left the 49ers for the Buccaneers on Wednesday.

Bush agreed to a four-year deal and could fill a huge hole at running back. The Lions haven't been able to count on 2010 first-round draft pick Jahvid Best, whose career is in doubt because of concussion issues.

"It's a running back's dream," Bush said. "One of the reasons I wanted to come here is to be able to bring a balanced attack."

Bush adds to a strong offense led by record-setting All-Pro receiver Calvin Johnson. The second overall pick in 2006 by New Orleans, Bush rushed for 986 yards for Miami last season after gaining 1,086 yards in 2011, his first year with the Dolphins.

"The thing that was important to us was not just the talent of Reggie Bush, but also the way those talents complemented the other players we have on offense," coach Jim Schwartz said. "That was really the basis of our interest in Reggie."

Welker got a two-year deal with the Broncos, and John Elway announced said on his Twitter: "Excited to have Wes join the Broncos. His production & toughness will be a great asset!"

The best slot receiver in the league, Welker caught 118 passes for 1,354 yards and six TDs last season.

Goldson gets a five-year contract worth $41.25 million. He receives $8.25 million per year and $22 million in guaranteed money. He spent the past two seasons on one-year contracts with the 49ers, including last year with the franchise tag for $6.2 million.

Cleveland remained active, agreeing to terms with linebacker Quentin Groves and tackle Desmond Bryant to further bolster a defense that added Ravens linebacker Paul Kruger hours after free agency began.

"With the additions of Paul and Desmond, we believe that we have significantly improved our defense overall, particularly our front seven," Browns CEO Joe Banner said.

Kruger is one of many Super Bowl winners to leave the Ravens, including hard-hitting safety Bernard Pollard, who was released Wednesday.

IndyCar star Graham Rahal wants to run in NASCAR race at Mid-Ohio

By Jenna Fryer

Associated Press

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — It's a big year for Graham Rahal, who for the first time in his career will be the top driver on his team.

As the IndyCar driver embarks on his first season with Rahal Letterman Lanigan Racing, Rahal is also looking to fill his schedule with at least one NASCAR race. Rahal wants to run the inaugural Nationwide Series race at hometown track Mid-Ohio and has been actively searching for a ride.

"I want to do it really bad," he said this week. "I'd love to do more, actually, just because I think it would be fun. But Mid-Ohio is the one I'm really trying to make happen and trying to find an opportunity."

The road course in Lexington, Ohio, is roughly an hour away from Rahal's hometown of Columbus and the race falls on an open date in the IndyCar schedule. It makes Mid-Ohio a natural fit for the potential

Graham Rahal

NASCAR debut for the 24-year-old Rahal, who stressed he is not trying to change series. He's just exploring.

"Finding a way to do Mid-Ohio is the priority right now, but I'd love to do an oval at some point," Rahal said. "I was watching the race at Las Vegas this weekend and was thinking someday I'd like to try it — not because I want a career change, but because one-offs would be fun. Our schedule certainly has the time."

For now, though, the focus is on his new ride with RLL.

He joins the team co-owned by his father, Bobby, after two seasons with Chip Ganassi Racing. Although the Ganassi organization says it runs its teams equally, the perception is that the emphasis is on championship contenders Dario Franchitti and Scott Dixon while Rahal and Charlie Kimball were something of a "B" team.

FAST START: Aric Almirola knows his Richard Petty Motorsports team doesn't have the deep pockets needed to compete with the top teams in NASCAR.

The organization stretches its resources and makes up for what it lacks with quality people. The result has been a fast start to the season that has Almirola ranked 10th in the Sprint Cup standings headed into Sunday's race at Bristol. Almirola believes that's right where the team should be ranked.

"I feel like it would be crazy for us to think that as new as we are, and the reality is we don't have the same amount of resources as some of the other teams, it would be crazy for us to think that we're a championship team at this moment," he said. "But I do feel like we're on the cusp of being a consistent top-10 team."

U.S. retail sales climb 1.1 percent in February

By Martin Crutsinger
Associated Press

WASHINGTON—Americans spent at the fastest pace in five months in February, boosting retail spending 1.1 percent compared with January. About half the jump reflected higher gas prices, but even excluding gas purchases, retail sales rose 0.6 percent.

The report Wednesday from the Commerce Department showed that Americans kept spending last month despite higher Social Security taxes that took effect this year. The retail sales report is the government's first look each month at consumer spending, which drives about 70 percent of economic activity.

Core retail sales, which exclude the volatile categories of gas, autos and building supply stores, rose 0.4 percent in February compared with January.

Economists were encouraged by the stronger-than-expected gain in retail sales. Some said the increase means the economy may be growing faster in the January-March quarter than they had forecast.

"This all suggests that the hit to spending from the payroll tax cut and higher gasoline prices, which reduce the amount of cash available to spend on other items, hasn't been too bad," said Paul Dales, senior U.S. economist at Capital Economics. "The recent pickup in both employment and earnings growth bodes well for consumption growth later in the year, too."

Sales at general merchandise stores, a category that includes major department stores such as Macy's and big discount stores such as Wal-Mart and Target, rose 0.5 percent in February. But the department store category as a whole fell 1 percent.

The solid increase in retail sales showed that Americans kept spending despite a payroll tax increase that has lowered take-home pay this year for most workers. Someone earning $50,000 has about $1,000 less to spend in 2013. A household with two high-paid workers has up to $4,500 less.

Consumers may be able to absorb higher taxes if employers continue hiring and increasing wages.

The economy added 236,000 jobs in February, driving the unemployment rate down to 7.7 percent, its lowest level in more than four years. The gains signaled that companies are confident enough in the economy to intensify hiring even in the face of tax increases and government spending cuts.

Since November, employers have added an average of 205,000 jobs a month, up from 154,000 a month in the previous four months.

The hiring spree has been fueled by steady improvement in housing, auto sales, manufacturing and corporate profits, along with record-low borrowing rates.

Dow average notches ninth gain in a row

By Steve Rothwell
Associated Press

NEW YORK — The Dow Jones industrial average notched its ninth gain in a row, giving the index its longest winning streak in more than sixteen years.

The index edged up 5.22 points, or 0.04 percent, to 14,455.28.

The Dow has risen every day this month and is up 10.3 percent this year, having surpassed its previous all-time high of 14,164.53 March 5th.

Demand for stocks has been propelled this year by optimism that the housing market is recovering and that companies have started to hire. Strong company earnings and ongoing stimulus from the Federal Reserve are also helping make stocks more attractive.

The Dow's last nine-day winning streak was logged in May 1996. In November of the same year, in the early days of the technology boom, it gained for 10 straight days.

Stocks overcame an early loss Wednesday, having edged lower at the start of the trading day despite an unexpectedly strong increase in U.S. consumer spending last month.

Americans spent at the fastest pace in five months in February, boosting retail spending 1.1 percent compared with January, the Commerce Department reported Wednesday. Economists had forecast a rise of just 0.2 percent, according to data provider FactSet.

Briefs

RICHMOND, VA.

Philip Morris CEO to step down

Philip Morris International Inc. said Wednesday that CEO Louis C. Camilleri will step down and be replaced by the man who led it before it became an independent company.
The seller of Marlboro and other cigarette brands overseas said its current chief operating officer, Andre Calantzopoulos, will become CEO immediately after the company's annual shareholder meeting May 8.

He also was nominated for election to the board. Camilleri will remain in his current job of chairman, the company said.

Nissan recalls five models over air bags

Nissan is recalling five of its 2013 models in the U.S. because a faulty sensor can permanently turn off the front-seat passenger air bag.

The recall covers the Altima midsize car, as well as the Leaf electric car, Pathfinder SUV and the Sentra compact. Also covered is the Infiniti JX35 SUV.

The Altima is Nissan's top-selling car with 49,000 sold this year.

Nissan says in documents filed with safety regulators that it hasn't determined the number of vehicles affected by the recall.

Sequester forces USDA to cut reports

The U.S. Department of Agriculture's statistical arm said it won't issue some agricultural reports this year because of automatic federal budget cuts, alarming some in the dairy industry who fear the information void could wreak havoc with milk prices.

The National Agricultural Statistics Service keeps tabs on a wide range of agricultural industries that generate billions of dollars for the U.S. economy.
Its reports influence the price and supply of many products that end up on American dinner plates.
Farmers use them to decide how much to produce, and food processors and traders look to them to determine when to buy and sell.

WASHINGTON
U.S. businesses boost restocking
U.S. companies increased their restocking in January from December, an encouraging signal that they expect consumers will spend more this year and help the economy grow faster.

The Commerce Department said Wednesday that business stockpiles grew 1 percent in January. That's up from 0.3 percent growth in December and the biggest gain since May 2011.

Total business sales fell 0.3 percent in January after a slight 0.1 percent rise in December.

Advice

Family’s ‘civilized’ behavior fraught with tawdry overtones

Dear Amy: My wife left me. I still live near her family. Her family has taken my side because she left me, even though she and I have tried our best to avoid the blame game. Her 19-year-old niece started helping me out when I had my young sons on the weekend. We started having sex. I didn’t seduce her. It just happened. I tried to stop, but we didn’t. There’s a 14-year age difference between us. My ex-wife figured out what was going on and called me. Instead of being angry, she teased me at first and then said she was happy that I was with her niece. Maybe my ex and I are a little too civilized. We were never all that passionate about each other, which led to my ex finding someone else. Her niece and I have been very passionate, but

I wonder if it’s the dark, taboo side that is the basis of the attraction. Now she wants to move in with me. When she told her mother, her mom took her to Victoria’s Secret to celebrate. I want an objective opinion. Are we nuts? — Worried
Dear Worried: There are children involved in your tawdry tale. Every choice you make should be for their benefit. There is no such thing as being “too civilized,” but you and your ex might be playing a mind game with each other.

This family seems to be pushing the two of you together (the mother taking your young lover to Victoria’s Secret to celebrate your relationship is icky). Whatever you choose, do not cohabit. You should explore your ability to have a relationship without leaping (or being pressured) into a domestic commitment. Dear Amy: I am a 17-year-old girl in high school. I am also gay. I have a good friend that I have known since elementary school. I have a crush on her, and I don’t quite know how to tell her how I feel. She gives mixed signals. She doesn’t know that I’m gay. If I say the wrong thing, it could seriously affect our friendship. — Puzzled Friend

Dear Puzzled: If your friend doesn’t know you are gay, the most obvious first step is to tell her. She may be sending out mixed signals, but you may also be misinterpreting her behavior. Once you disclose this to her, you should wait for a couple of weeks to see how she reacts to this news.

Horoscope

TODAY’S BIRTHDAY (March 14). The next six weeks feature amusing developments, including public singing or dancing. You owe April’s victory to family and excellent training. Ardently follow your interests, and in May you’ll make a rather dazzling new friend. Consider going into business together. A property investment will be favored in August. Aries and Gemini people adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 32, 11, 14, 49 and 45. ARIES (March 21-April 19). You may realize that you could improve in some areas, but don’t use this as an excuse to pick on or abandon yourself. Get on your own side. No one else can play your role in this game if you don’t do it. TAURUS (April 20-May 20). You will decipher complex problems almost magically. Your intuition will guide you brilliantly. You won’t need to hear each side or get proof of what is really going on. The answer will be clear. GEMINI (May 21-June 21). Your style of communication is like a universal language all its own. With Mercury cheering on your efforts, you will bring a diverse group of people together. CANCER (June 22-July 22). You will thrive in a group setting. Excellent sportsmanship and skillful teamwork are specialties of yours. Don’t be surprised if the group can’t function without you. LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). You don’t have to do anything active to change the world now. Everything is changed just because you exist. You may choose to be active anyway, or you may sit back and enjoy just being alive. VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). It’s said that shared joy is multiplied; shared grief is divided. Wherever people are, you join them and make the emotional landscape come alive with positive feeling. LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). When the cosmos send you an invitation, be sure to R.S.V.P. When you make your intentions known, things start to happen. Even if you don’t yet have what you need to move forward, move forward anyway. SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). Anyone who asks you a question will get more than they bargained for. You’re a storehouse of knowledge and creativity. Your impulse is to share generously. SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). You won’t seek a dangerous position, and yet there is no such thing as complete safety in this world, either. Adventure would not be adventure without the element of risk. CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). Everything will progress whether or not you have a plan. This is an excellent day for watching the way things work naturally without your interference. What you learn may save you from making unneeded efforts later. AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). Committing to one choice means closing the door on any other choice that is not in line with it. You’ll spend most of the day trying to figure out which choices go together. PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). Some will push their luck to explore the unknown. You’d like to think things over awhile. How badly do you really want to know? Maybe not badly enough to tempt fate.

Dryer exhaust hose is major fire cause

Dear Heloise: I recently purchased an electric dryer. Before the deliveryman installed the new one, I vacuumed out the exhaust hose and was surprised to get a lot of lint. I noticed that the dryer did not completely dry the clothes on the setting I chose, so I tried another setting, with success. I put in another load, and shortly after, I noticed a red light under the “check vent” option. My husband went outside and took the cap off the dryer vent, stuck his hand inside and pulled out compacted lint. The manual says to clean the exhaust hose every two years, but I recommend once a year to be safe. Since I was careful to clean the lint filter, I didn’t give the exhaust hose a thought. This could have started a fire. — Sue W. in Ohio

Dear Sue: Thanks for the very important reminder! The National Fire Protection Association (www.nfpa.org) tells us that the No. 1 cause of home dryer fires is due to dryers (mainly the lint filter and hose) not being cleaned.

God has not promised to spare us evil

God — not at all. Isn’t it better to face life’s trials and hardships with God than without Him? Isn’t it better to know He is with us to help us than to be totally alone when disaster strikes? Of course it is. Some of the saddest words in the Bible are those that speak of people who are “without hope and without God in the world” (Ephesians 2:12). Furthermore, when we know Christ, our hope is not in this world alone. Instead, we know that someday all the troubles of this world will be over, and we will be safely with God in heaven forever. And some day all the things we don’t presently understand will be made clear. Because of Christ we can have hope — hope right now, and hope for eternity. Don’t turn your back on God, and don’t talk yourself into thinking you don’t need Him — for you do. The greatest discovery you’ll ever make is that God loves you and wants you to be part of His family forever. And you can be, as you open your heart and life to Jesus Christ. He alone is our “hope of glory” (Colossians 1:27).

‘Healthy’ person’s high blood pressure can be tough to figure

Dear Dr. Roach: I am a 62-year-old white, petite female who has suffered with hypertension since age 33. I have never been the slightest overweight, never drink alcohol and have never used drugs or smoked. I try to exercise every day. Some days, I have migraines, and I believe it is from the high blood pressure. My family has no history of HBP. I am not a diabetic. Yesterday, at the doctor’s office, my blood pressure was 172/118 and my pulse was 109. I was shocked. I have been in intensive care several times to get it down. I can’t figure out why it has such erratic behavior. It continues to be up even on strong medications. I am currently on four medications, and yesterday my doctor added another. After a couple of years, I have had to change the medications because they seem to quit working.

Are there new drugs for HBP? Is there something I’m not doing that I should or shouldn’t do? I am very fearful of a stroke or heart attack. I have had every test there is to find the cause. Nothing showed up. — M.S.
Dear M.S.: Most of the time, we are unable to figure out why a person has elevated blood pressure. Less than 5 percent of the time, after a careful look, we can find one of the “secondary” causes of hypertension whose treatment can reverse HBP. The most common is called renal artery stenosis. Blockages in the arteries that bring blood to the kidneys cause the kidneys to sense low blood pressure, so the kidneys respond by increasing renin, which begins a cascade that increases the blood pressure. Another rare cause is a pheochromocytoma, a benign tumor of the adrenal gland, which I mentioned a week or two ago. It secretes epinephrine (adrenaline) and causes high blood pressure and fast heart rate. If you have had every test, your doctor would have looked for these causes, but a pheochromocytoma can be missed. I see many cases of sleep apnea causing difficult-to-control high blood pressure, and even a petite woman can have sleep apnea, even though we think of it more commonly in the overweight. There are experts in managing high blood pressure, and this sounds like a time to consult one if you haven’t already. I can’t suggest a medicine without knowing a lot more, and that is what a hypertension specialist would do.

Holy Name student wins state piggy bank contest

Girl's design displayed in Frankfort

Gleaner staff

Most kids keep a piggy bank, but Ashley Royer won prize money by designing hers for a state-wide contest.

Royer, 12, is the daughter of Chip and Diane Royer of Henderson.

The Holy Name seventh-grader was one of 14 Kentucky youths to win the 2013 Piggy Bank Design Contest, which was administered through the University of Kentucky Cooperative Extension Service.

The contest, which was sponsored by the Kentucky Higher Education Assistance Authority and the Kentucky Education Plan Trust, was held to promote Kentucky Saves Week.

Kentucky Saves is part of a nationwide America Saves effort focused on making household savings a priority. The state initiative promotes positive saving habits to help Kentuckians work toward financial stability.

the project through the local extension office and felt like she could make a prize-winning bank, according to her mother.

She fashioned her piggy bank from papier-mâché and decoupage. All materials used were things she had at home, so there was no cost to make the pig.

The project took a few weeks since the papier-mâché needed time to dry between the layers. The decoupage layers also took time to dry.

As a contest winner, Royer attended a ceremony in Frankfort held at the State Capital Rotunda on Feb. 26 and received $250 in a Kentucky Education Savings Plant Trust entity account. All the prize-winning banks were placed on display in the Rotunda.

PUBLIC HEARING NOTICE

The City of Henderson is in the process of preparing the 2013-2014 Consolidated Plan- Action Plan that will identify the housing, living environment and economic needs of low-income citizens within the City.

The City will hold four public hearings to solicit from citizens and local service agencies ideas for expenditure of Community Development Block Grant funds.

DATE	PLACE	TIME
Thursday, March 28	City of Henderson - Peabody Building Community Development Department 1990 Barret Court, Suite B Henderson, Kentucky 42420	1:00 p.m.
Thursday, March 28	John F. Kennedy Community Center 515 South Alvasia Street Henderson, KY 42420	6:00 p.m.
Friday, March 29	The Gathering Place 1817 North Elm Street Henderson, KY 42420	3:00 p.m.
Friday, March 29	Housing Authority Barrett Center Boswell Room 111 South Adams Street Henderson, Kentucky	6:00 p.m.

The City expects to receive approximately $213,922.00 in the fiscal year starting July 1, 2013 from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development. These funds may be expended for a wide-range of activities, however, every activity must either benefit low-income persons or address a slum and blight condition. You are encouraged to make known to the City of Henderson any ideas/projects which you believe should be considered for expenditure from the Community Development Block Grant fund.

Any such comments/ideas may be submitted at the public hearings, via mail to the City of Henderson, Henderson Community Development Department, P.O. Box 716, Henderson, Kentucky 42419-0716 or via E-Mail tammyw@cityofhendersonky.org on or before March 29, 2013.

All meeting rooms are accessible to the disabled. The City of Henderson does not discriminate on the basis of race, color, religion, sex, national origin, age or disability. Persons seeking more information in this matter or any disabled citizen needing reasonable accommodations or a language interpreter in order to participate in the citizen review process should contact Tammy Willett at 270/831-1277 (TDD# 800/247-2510 for the hearing impaired). Requests for reasonable accommodations must be made at least three business days before the meeting.

The City of Henderson supports Equal Housing Opportunity and is committed to nondiscrimination.

BEST BETS

7 p.m. on 14
Community

As everyone tries to determine what caused Chang's (Ken Jeong) amnesia, Abed (Danny Pudi) records it all for a documentary, while Dean Pelton (Jim Rash) enlists the study group to help him obtain a medical research grant. Jeff (Joel McHale) has his own suspicions about Chang's memory loss in the new episode "Advanced Documentary Filmmaking." Gillian Jacobs and Yvette Nicole Brown also star.

7 p.m. on 11
NBA Basketball

An in-state and divisional rivalry plays out tonight at the AT&T Center in San Antonio, where Tony Parker and the Southwest-leading Spurs welcome in Dirk Nowitzki and the struggling Dallas Mavericks. In the second game of the TNT double-header, Carmelo Anthony and the New York Knicks hope to enhance their post-season standing with a victory over LaMarcus Aldridge and the homestanding Portland Trail Blazers.

7 p.m. on 16
Highway Thru Hell

Kevin considers yardman Samy, a 40-year-old immigrant from Fiji, to be his assistant. When Kevin buys a video camera to film wrecks, his new hobby starts to get in the way of his current job. A head-on collision between two semis has the entire crew battling to clear the wreckage and get the road open. While Kevin captures the action on tape, Samy does most of the heavy lifting in the new episode "Yin and Yang."

8 p.m. on 25
Grey's Anatomy

Chaos and discord are the order of the day under the hospital's new management, and one of the doctors is giving serious consideration to going elsewhere. Multiple transplant surgeries have the staff scrambling in the new episode "Transplant Wasteland." Ellen Pompeo, Patrick Dempsey, Sandra Oh and Justin Chambers star.

8 p.m. on 43
Battleground: Rhino Wars

In this new episode, Saw puts the team to work on a variety of fronts: hunting down illegal rhino horns across the border in Mozambique, microchipping live rhinos and raiding a suspected poachers compound. Intel specialist Ron gets close to a criminal informant and finds out about a team of poachers that's armed with AK-47s in "Playing With Fire."

8:30 p.m. on 10
Anger Management

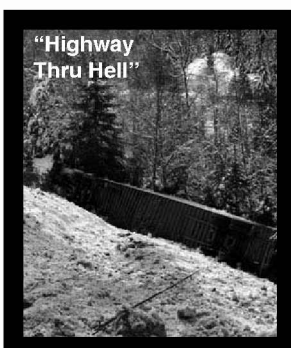

Charlie (Charlie Sheen) gets his back up when his father (Martin Sheen, the actor's real-life dad) has Sam (Daniela Bobadilla) baptized without telling him in the new episode "Charlie and Catholicism." Barry Corbin and Shawnee Smith also star.

9 p.m. on 11
Archer

A mission to prevent the sale of some enriched uranium requires Archer and Lana to pose as a newlywed couple, but things don't exactly go smoothly in the new episode "The Honeymooners." H. Jon Benjamin and Aisha Tyler lead the voice cast.

9:02 p.m. on 25
Scandal

As Fitz (Tony Goldwyn) tries to figure out whom he can trust, Olivia (Kerry Washington) becomes attracted to a handsome stranger (Scott Foley), but when she and Fitz find themselves in the same room, sparks fly. A new case has the Pope & Associates team working with David Rosen (Joshua Malina) instead of against him in "Whiskey Tango Foxtrot." Columbus Short also stars.

9:15 p.m. on 11
Girls

Hannah (Lena Dunham) is pushed to the brink by a looming deadline and pressure from her publisher (John Cameron Mitchell). Adam (Adam Driver) has a misunderstanding with his new girlfriend. Shoshanna (Zosia Mamet) tries to avoid Ray (Alex Karpovsky) at Charlie's (Chris Abbott) work party, while Marnie (Allison Williams) takes a step toward realizing her dreams in the new episode "On All Fours."

9:30 p.m. on 17
The Big Bang Theory

After tampering with Sheldon's (Jim Parsons) Arctic expedition data, the guys follow him back to Texas, where he has fled in disgrace, but the trip throws a wrench into Leonard's (Johnny Galecki) hopes for a romantic encounter with Penny (Kaley Cuoco) in "The Electric Can Opener Fluctuation." Laurie Metcalf ("Roseanne") guest stars.

9:30 p.m. on 10
Friends

Hank Azaria ("The Simpsons," "Mad About You") guest stars as Phoebe's (Lisa Kudrow) old boyfriend whose return to town causes a row between her and Joe (Matt LeBlanc) when she tries to cancel their weekly dinner. Rachel and Chandler (Jennifer Aniston, Matthew Perry) can't keep their hands off the yummy cheesecakes being delivered to a neighbor. Monica (Courteney Cox Arquette) tags along with Ross (David Schwimmer) to their cousin's wedding — just so she can give the bride a piece of her mind for not inviting her — in "The One With All the Cheesecakes."

Reckless Driving IS ONE PARTY YOU DON'T WANT TO CRASH

(There is no cheesy slogan to prevent reckless driving.)

There is no spokesperson with a catchy phrase to remind the driver to slow down, stop eating, quit messing with the radio or pay attention to the road. There's Only You. Speak Up.
